For the non-athlete: Whether you hurt your back gardening, injured your knee hiking on vacation or strained your shoulder playing catch with the kids – sports medicine can help. Tulane Institute of Sports Medicine (TISM) treats injuries of the back, shoulder, neck, elbow, wrist, knee and ankle. Everything you need for diagnosis and treatment (including imaging and physical therapy) is conveniently located in one place.

For the athlete: Tulane Institute of Sports Medicine enjoys a reputation for focused attention on injury prevention and management for all major sports, whether amateur or professional. Their goal is to enable the athlete to reach his or her full potential during competition and, in the event of an injury, return that athlete to 100% capability as effectively as possible. Using the most advanced techniques for diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation, the Institute provides one-stop, comprehensive sports medicine within a preventative and curative framework.

TISM is made up of some of the finest orthopaedic doctors, surgeons, trainers and physical therapists in the region. Make an appointment today and let us show you what sports medicine can do for you!

TISM is conveniently located Uptown on the Tulane Campus, one block off Claiborne, with free parking.
